

Want to see CEC certified as a Living Building?

You can help!

In order to receive certification, CEC must conduct a survey with its visitors about the beauty of our new building. We will present this information to the Living Building Challenge auditing committee and they will decide, based on that information, whether or not our building complies with the Beauty Petal, described below.

The intent of our beauty petal is to recognize the need for beauty to show that we care enough about our surroundings to want to preserve, conserve and do what is right for our community. Our world is filled with environments that are not pleasant to the human eye, nor comfortable to exist in. If we carry these ugly environments over into our familiar spaces, our homes, workplaces, and community areas, then it becomes acceptable for our outlying communities, our farms, forests and fields to be uncared for as well. This mindset would make it easy to accept clear-cut forests, factory farms, and strip mines a normal thing to see every day, instead of encouraging society to care for these important parts of our world.

LIVING BUILDING
CHALLENGESM

With this in mind, do you think this project has succeeded? In other words, do you feel that it has beautiful materials, lighting, landscaping, site location, views of nature, furnishings and spatial character?

Yes

No

What words come to mind after visiting this building?

Comments: